Welcome to Cusco city and then, we will head towards the Sacred Valley. Visit to the Sacred Valley: Pisac Market and Yucay Living Museum. Lunch at a 20th-century colonial hacienda. This morning, we will take the road to the Sacred Valley and discover Pisac, a beautiful place where the Inca and the colonial coexist perfectly and are part of the daily life of its inhabitants. We will visit this picturesque town, famous for its craft fairs and where you can buy the most delicate ceramics, textiles, and jewellery.

We will make a stop on the tour to enjoy lunch in a colonial hacienda. A warm and welcoming atmosphere, nuanced with baroque and classical music, accompanies our meal and magically transports us to a sense of peace. The house, surrounded by green areas, wonderful orchards, gardens with beautiful flowers and trees are just a sample of the good taste of its owners. The food has a special mention, with a particular homemade flavour, without losing the sophisticated presentation and the use of organic ingredients so valued today, many of them produced on the farm itself.

We continue to Yucay Living Museum. An interpretation centre for Andean traditions, where demonstrations of textile production are carried out, including washing, dyeing, spinning and the wool weaving process; as well as pottery techniques, agricultural activities of the area, ceramics, and silverware in the same way in which they were worked in antiquity; an original recreation of Inca traditions. Also, in this place you will find alpacas, llamas, and sheep, where you will have the opportunity to feed them.

Day 05

Day 05: Sacred Valley / Cusco

Full day tour to Sacred Valley: Fortress of Ollantaytambo and Alqa Museum. Lunch at Wayra restaurant with a show of Peruvian Paso Horses. Today we will visit Ollantaytambo, one of the last living towns of the Inca culture, which was jealously guarded by a colossal fortress. We will discover the great archaeological complex of what was a tambo or city of rest and lodging for the royal retinues that travelled long distances. Its architectural remains still preserve walls and towers that were used to protect it from invasions.

The Alqa Museum of Andean popular art is a truly sensory experience. The exhibition halls are designed to engage not only our sense of sight but also our sense of smell and, most notably, our sense of touch. That is why, logically, it encourages the manipulation of objects. Thus, an almost unconscious choice and relationship of the visitor with the pieces of art and the intimate environment that surrounds him is produced, which leads the viewer to new degrees of consciousness, through possible provoked associations. Everything previously described is a strategy, an operation that is carried out by the museum with the purpose of generating in the viewer an integral understanding of the piece of art as of the artist, of his daily activity, the reasons for his production and the real context that it faces.

Note: Alqa Museum is closed on Mondays, instead, we will visit the Seminario Ceramic workshop.

Before returning to Cusco, we will enjoy a delightful lunch in Wayra and then enjoy a show of Peruvian Paso Horses, known throughout the world for their smooth movements and galloping with an unusual spirit. No other horse combines strength, intelligence, and beauty as perfectly as the Peruvian Paso Horse.

Meals: Breakfast, lunch.

Overnight in Cusco: Inkaterra La Casona Relais & Châteaux.

Meal: Breakfast and Lunch
